European Cup-ties are more like small wars

Dai Rees.

Rees loses ball—and caddy

DAI REES, the Welsh professional, lost both his ball and his caddy at the ninth hole in yesterday's pro-amateur tournament played as a prelude to the Canada cup matches, which start in Hawaii today.

His Hawaiian caddy refused to continue the round after Rees showed anger at his failure to sight a ball that went to the left of the green.

The Welshman lost a ball on the small hole in a practice round on Tuesday, and yesterday he sent his caddy ahead especially to keep a lookout.

"In thirty years of professional golf this is the first time I've been sacked by a caddy," Rees said. A new caddy carried his bag the rest of the way.

Rees was in top form and came to the ninth four under par. The lost ball gave him a seven at the ninth, but he finished with 34 for the first nine and 37 back, for a round of 71.

Record

The United States star, Arnold Palmer, beat the course record, though he said earlier that he was suffering pain in his hand.

Palmer went round in 65 in the amateur — professional tournament.

Palmer and Jack Nicklaus, again his partner here, won the Canada Cup team prize for the United States in Paris last year. Nicklaus took the individual title.

The Englishmen, Peter Alliss and Bernard Hunt, playing right behind Palmer and Nicklaus, were slowed by the large crowds following the Americans and found the 84-degree heat rather trying.

Hunt went round in 72, Alliss putted badly and took 75.

THERE'LL be no over-confidence in Liverpool even though we go to Brussels on December 16 with a 3-0 lead over Belgian champions Anderlecht.

Too many occasions spring to mind from these great European competitions when a similar lead has been thrown away.

There were two last season, both in the European Cup-winners' Cup. Manchester United beat Sporting of Lisbon 4-1 in the first leg of a quarter-final. They lost the second leg 0-5 in Portugal just three weeks later.

Glasgow Celtic beat M.T.K. of Budapest 3-0 before 51,000 fans. Two weeks later the Hungarians won 4-0 before 10,000 fans to go into the final.

Not even a replay in either case—and Sporting Lisbon went on to meet and beat M.T.K. in the final 1-0 in Antwerp after a 3-3 draw in Brussels.

That's how near you can get, and yet fail.

Same style

We are not deceiving ourselves about Anderlecht. They are truly one of the aristocrats of the game. In the Belgian league they still have a 100 per cent record after nine games.

Few gave us a real chance of winning—and Anderlecht arrived in Liverpool full of themselves, as they were entitled to be. But they didn't take the trouble to see us play beforehand. That's another lesson in over-confidence.

By Bill Shankly

I spoke on several occasions to my brother Bob, manager of Dundee who knocked Anderlecht out of the European Cup two seasons ago. There were not many of the same players but they played the same style.

I confirmed that for myself when I saw them in Brussels in a league game. The Belgian national side play the same way too—a definite 4-2-4 formation with the accent on holding the ball.

More at stake

Our plan was to get into the middle of the field where we saw them playing so much against England and doing well enough to hold them to a draw at Wembley.

We played Tommy Smith, a wing-half, at inside-forward. We gave him a simplified job. He did his stuff from deep with the other wing-halves Milne and Stevenson going forward.

Maybe England would have set their stall out differently too had they seen the Belgians beforehand.

I'm not saying it would have made any difference at Wembley. There was more at stake for our players than for those playing in the international match. Our players know their living depends on it when they play.

Plans without spirit are useless. We were like terriers against them, strong in the tackle, going for every ball. We stifled them.

And eventually we broke their spirit. In the end we were toying with them. I thought we should have had a penalty. We could easily have won by a much greater margin.

Means too much

Maybe we'll play it differently in Brussels in the second leg. I don't know yet. We have other things to do—like improving our league position.

In Brussels, before their own crowd, they might be a quite different proposition.

But we do not intend to lose. It means too much to us. We keep our home gates and already that means we have had 76,000 extra paying customers this season.

Of course, the European Cup can affect our league programme too, the match following as well as the one before the game with the Europeans. But it is a wonderful stimulant.

More intense

No doubt about it—it is the world's top club competition. The matches are like small wars and they become more intense as you progress.

I'm looking forward to more of it—that is why we must knock out Anderlecht. And here is hoping Rangers join us in the next round.

Rapid of Vienna must be a good team to hold Rangers to 0-1 at Ibrox but Rangers are the most experienced British team in this kind of football. They are far from beaten yet.
